EICHMANN COURT HEARS OF DUTCH CHRISTIANS WHO RISKED THEIR LIVES TO SAVE JEWS FROM NAZIS, CALLED STRIKES IN PROTEST, WORE YELLOW STAR; HEARS SON OF CHIEF RABBI OF DENMARK CITE KING WHO PREVENTED WHOLESALE DEPORTATION, SET OPEN EXAMPLE IN DAYS OF TERROR

The disaster that befell the Jews of Amsterdam after the Nazi invasion of the Netherlands in 1940 was recounted at the trial of Adolf Eichmann. One of the few survivors, of the Jewish quarter, Dr. Joseph Melkman told how Jews hid in attics and warehouses until they were ferreted out by German soldiers and deported to death camps.

Dr. Melkman recalled how, twenty-one years ago, the Nazis invaded the Low Countries and sealed the doom of Dutch Jews, says the New York Times. Of the 140,000 Jews who were alive in the Netherlands on May 10, 1940, fewer than 6,000 survived the war, he said.

Dr. Melkman, now a senior official in the Israeli Education Ministry, was a teacher and editor of a Zionist weekly in Amsterdam. He taught Latin and Greek at the Jewish High School that was attended by Anne Frank, the teenage diarist of the Amsterdam tragedy who died at Bergen Belsen.

The witness told the court trying Eichmann for his role in the murder of 6,000,000 Jews how a 10-year-old boy had been locked up for a year in a narrow room. The child, he said, was unable to play, unable even to speak above a whisper.

The boy continued to speak in a whisper, even after he was caught and sent to Westerbork, the lonely camp among the peat bogs that was to become a collecting station for the gas chamber of Auschwitz. Encouraged by grown-ups, the boy later learned how to run and shout.

"It is very difficult to describe the psychological suffering inflicted on a boy who has to live for such a long period in hiding," Dr. Melkman said, reports the New York Times. "Often we would tell ourselves when we were in the camp (Westerbork) and saw the children running and shouting that this was better than hiding," Dr. Melkman said. "But of course we did not know the fate that awaited most of us."

Eichmann, sallow and clerical, sat in the glass cage that juts like the prow of a ship into the courtroom as the prosecution charged that he was the man who had arranged the final ride of most Dutch Jews to the extermination camps in the East.

According to documents submitted by the assistant prosecutor, Gavriel Bach, Eichmann was the transportation officer who had provided the railroad cattle cars in which 860 mental patients and mentally defective children were shipped from Appeldoorn to Auschwitz in January, 1943.

Eichmann's defense counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius, protested gently at one point that Mr. Bach was trying to imply that Eichmann "initiated" the evacuation of mental patients to the Auschwitz death camp. Mr. Bach had said: "Eichmann gave instructions to evacuate the asylum and sent a special train."

This implication struck at the main pillar of Eichmann's defense — that he was merely a subordinate who had provided the transportation for Jews who were to be deported to extermination camps.

Dr. Servatius protested that there was nothing in the prosecution documents to corroborate that Eichmann had been responsible for orders to evacuate the asylum. Mr. Bach then conceded that the proposal to evacuate the mental patients had originated with the German occupation forces, who wanted the building as a military hospital.

Dr. Melkman said the evacuation of the asylum had been witnessed by a daughter of the Chief Rabbi of The Hague, who happened to be visiting the institution and who was thrown into a van with the insane, says the New York Times. He said the patients were taken straight to Auschwitz in sealed cattle cars and that all who survived the four-day ride were killed at Auschwitz.

The loading of the cattle cars was described in an affidavit of a Dutch railroad worker, who testified that most of the patients had been clad only in nightshirts, although it was January, and that some of the mentally defective children were naked.

The insane were unattended, according to this affidavit. Their nurses were locked separately in a passenger coach.

The train halted twice before reaching the German frontier and dead were removed, according to the railroad worker, whose testimony was heard at the postwar trial of Wilhelm Harster, former commander of the Nazi security police in the Netherlands. Harster was tried by a Dutch tribunal and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment. He is now free.

Deportations from Westerbork to the death camps took place every Tuesday Dr. Melkman testified. A Jewish committee was assigned the ghastly task of selecting the weekly quota of passengers for Auschwitz.

They had to select a little more than the quota, because someone always died en route and Auschwitz had to get the full quota. Thus, if the quota called for 1,000, the Jewish elders would have to send 1,020, Dr. Melkman said.

"As each Tuesday came nearer, tension rose," the witness said, reports the New York Times. "The roll call always came at 3 A.M. in the middle of the night, when there was deathly silence and darkness. All the barracks had been hermetically sealed. We were not permitted to go in or out. Then the barracks doors would call out the names of the doomed people."

"I must say, that of all the horrible things I witnessed later, this was the most shattering," Dr. Melkman said.

"Week after week at 3 A.M. Tuesday the alphabetical list of the doomed was called out. Sometimes you yourself would be included and if not you then your relatives, friends, acquaintances. For years afterwards those early hours of Tuesday morning continued to have a fearful significance for us."

One of the judges, Benjamin Halevy, found it difficult to believe that a Jewish committee could perform for the Nazis the task of selecting victims for Auschwitz. The judge questioned Dr. Melkman sharply: "Was not this an impossible task?" he demanded. "It was an inhuman and impossible task," Dr. Melkman replied, "but it was carried out. They (the Jewish elders) could have turned it down, but then they themselves would have been taken or other people picked out at random in the camp," Dr. Melkman said. "The eventual result would not have been different whether they had carried it out or refused."

Judge Halevy asked: "And they themselves were also deported eventually?"

The witness replied: "No. Those who headed the camp stayed there until the end of the war. A small number of Jews stayed at Westerbork; at the end of the war transports were stopped, there were no more deportations."

Eichmann trial witnesses told of intervention by Christians, who risked their lives to save Jews from the Nazis. Dr. Melkman told of general strikes called in protest against the persecution of Jews in the early days of the Nazi occupation of Amsterdam where more than sixty per cent of the Netherlands Jews lived, says the New York Times. When the Nazis forced Jews to wear a yellow Star of David, many Amsterdam gentiles wore them, too.

Werner David Melchior, son of Marcus Melchior, the Chief Rabbi of Denmark, told how almost all the Danish Jewish community of about 8,000 was saved by courageous Danes.

He told how his father found refuge with a Lutheran minister and of how the Torah scrolls from the synagogue were hidden in the cellar of a Copenhagen church. It was largely the indomitable spirit of King Christian that prevented the wholesale deportation of Danish Jews, the witness said.

The old King stoutly resisted Nazi interference with the internal affairs of Denmark and, as a result, only 472 Jews were deported. Moreover, those who were deported received favored treatment — they were sent to Theresienstadt, which was certainly preferable to Auschwitz.

Mr. Melchior said that just before he left Denmark he returned some books to the university library. "I was there only ten minutes and in that period two Danes, with whom I had only a nodding acquaintance, came up to me and said they had heard rumors of possible action and that I should call on them if I or any other Jew were in trouble."

The prosecution presented documents that allegedly prove that Eichmann had been enraged by the escape of the Danish Jews and even suspected his aides of "sabotage."

Among the documents submitted by the prosecution were several rejections by Eichmann or his subordinates of requests by the Nazi Foreign Office for intercession in cases of rich Jews, says the New York Times. In the case of a law professor at the University of Leyden, Eichmann's deputy, Maj. Rolf Guenther, turned down a Foreign Office request that the professor be spared from deportation because he was willing to pay a ransom of 150,000 Swiss francs.

The sinister world of Auschwitz, greatest of the Nazi death camps, was revived in all its insane terror by survivors at the trial of Adolf Eichmann.

The testimony was surpassingly dreadful, says Homer Bigart, of the New York Times. Seeking to build up a crescendo of horror in the final days of his case against Eichmann, Attorney General Gideon Hausner tried to draw every macabre detail on the Nazi's program to annihilate Europe's Jews.

The first witness against Eichmann, the former Gestapo (secret police) aide who was in charge of the annihilation program, was an Israeli author, Yehiel De-Nur, who writes under the pen name of Katznick.

Mr. De-Nur gave a choked cry shortly after he began to testify and fell headlong from the witness stand. He was carried off on a stretcher.

Harder witnesses against Eichmann, charged by Israel with the murder of millions of Jews, told how human ashes from the Auschwitz crematories were scattered on icy roads from a cart pulled by twenty children.

They told how a sadistic doctor named Mengele, who was in charge of selections for the gas chambers, known as "The Angel of Death," and how he rode around the vast camp on a bicycle whistling tunes by Mozart.

Most of the testimony was of filthy quarters, hunger and the stench of burning bodies. Eichmann was hardly mentioned at all.

Set in the forlorn sand dunes and marshes of Upper Silesia, Auschwitz was selected as the main extermination center to carry out "the final solution of the Jewish problem." It was an important railroad junction close to areas in Central Europe in which many Jews lived.

It had the advantage of being in an area where there were many big war factories. The smoke and stench from the crematories were regarded by persons on passing trains as just part of the effluvia of war production.

The Nazis started to operate the Auschwitz gas chambers in 1942 and at the peak of activity in 1944 the crematories were consuming up to 10,000 gassed victims a day, says the New York Times. There is no accurate figure on the number of Jews who were slaughtered at Auschwitz. But estimates range from 1,000,000 to 2,600,000.

Gypsies were also murdered at Auschwitz. A witness, Dr. Aharon Beilin, told how trainloads of gypsies arrived in September, 1944. The gypsies expected only to be interned.

"They wore colored shawls and they entered the camp playing musical instruments and singing," Dr. Beilin testified.

Some of the young gypsies wore the uniform of the Hitler Youth Movement and others used the greeting, "Heil Hitler!"

The doctor's first patient, a girl with tuberculosis, refused to be examined by a Jewish doctor. Six weeks later he saw the same girl again, emaciated with the disease. She said: "It is murder! We did not know that."

The gypsies included men in the uniform of the German Army. They were very bitter, Dr. Beilin said. They told him: "We have been very loyal to the Fatherland, and look what they have done to us."

Dr. Mengele selected 600 of the gypsies for the gas chambers. The others were taken to the gas chambers, the witness said.

One day, Dr. Beilin said, he had to examine forty Greek Jewish youths. They said they had been victims of sterilization experiments conducted by Horst Schumann, an S. S. (elite guard) physician.

Attorney General Gideon Hausner called Joseph Kleinman, a 31-year-old carpenter from Jerusalem, who was a small boy when he arrived at Auschwitz with his parents and sister in 1943. He testified that all the other members of his family had been gassed.

Mr. Kleinman described how Mengele arrived on a bicycle for periodical selections and stood with his hands clasped behind his back and his lips tightly shut as he indicated with a motion of his finger who should be gassed and who should live a little longer, says the New York Times. On the eve of Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) the "Angel of Death" cycled into the football ground where 2,000 Jewish boys were assembled for a major selection. Mr. Kleinman testified.

The witness told of how a board was nailed on a post at the level of the head of a tall boy and of how the boys were ordered to pass under the board.

"We knew that the little ones who could not reach the board would be taken to their death," Mr. Kleinman said.

The witness said he tried to make himself tall enough to pass by stuffing stones and pieces of his brother's cloth cap into his shoes. When he realized that he would not make it that way, he slipped out of line and attached himself to a column of boys who had successfully passed the test.

Mr. Bakon, the artist who testified on cannibalism, said that Mrs. Yehuda Edelstein, wife of the leader of the Czech Jewish community who was detained in Auschwitz, had been promised by Eichmann that she would rejoin her husband.

A few days later an S.S. car came and picked Mrs. Edelstein up, Mr. Bakon said. But the reunion took place in the crematorium. The whole family had been shot.

Mr. Bakon was challenged in cross-examination by Eichmann's defense counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius, who said it was odd that Mr. Bakon had made no mention of the alleged Eichmann promise in two lengthy interrogations by the Israeli police, says the New York Times. Mr. Bakon returned to the stand later in the day armed with proof that he had mentioned this to the police in June of 1960.

Dr. Servatius claimed that Eichmann was in Hungary in June, 1944, when he was said to have made the promise to Mrs. Edelstein in Prague.

The uprising of Jewish slaves at Sobibor, the secret Nazi death camp on the Bug River in eastern Poland, in October, 1943, was narrated.

Paiewonsky, Jewish Governor, Stirs Up Virgin Islands Commerce And Tourist Industry

Gov. Ralph Paiewonsky has stirred up more activity than the Virgin Islands have seen in ten years. Mr. Paiewonsky ranks among the most important achievements to date the remodeling of the Virgin Islands incentive program, based on the analysis of Oscar Gass, an economic adviser, and a two-man task force from the Federal Government, says the New York Times. Under the revised program, new enterprises will receive certificates of exemption from the Virgin Islands Government that will apply to the interest on any approved indebtedness.

Thus, Virgin Islands developers can offer tax-exempt interest to the financial institutions making a loan on an approved project, regardless of where these institutions are located.

"While tourism is an important segment of our economy," Mr. Paiewonsky said in an interview, "I don't think we should have all our eggs in one basket. With the help of Congress we could expand this new program of tax incentives on loans to include factories, new small industries, and, for a limited time, a crash program of home building. After the ten years' tax exemption, the Virgin Islands would thus have on the tax rolls millions of dollars worth of taxable wealth created by the program.

"Equally important, we could improve the quality of employment, provide higher year-around wages, and keep our islanders at home. At the present time, 60 per cent of our population is of school age, the rest overwhelmingly aged or indigent. We want to change that balance."

Senator Earle B. Ortley, leader of the Unity party, also rates the tax-exemption program among the top achievements.

A $10,000,000 bond issue to finance three new hotels had been stalled for more than a year. With the new Administration, enabling legislation was passed during the session of the Legislature. Until now, the Virgin Islands have in many cases been unable to compete with rival islands of other flags in attracting American investment capital.

Mr. Paiewonsky had overwhelmingly support from islanders in his battle for confirmation, says the New York Times. And his actions since becoming Governor have won wide approval among native leaders.

One of the most crucial problems has been low- and middle-priced housing. An official estimate notes that 80 per cent of the Virgin Islanders occupy substandard housing. For two years negotiations have been bogged down over one of the ugliest slums in Charlotte Amalie, with Government and private ownership unable to reach an agreement to clear the way for public acquisition of the land.

Within forty-eight hours the Paiewonsky Administration reached an agreement with the principals, court condemnation proceedings were dropped, and the Government acquired the necessary fifteen acres to develop the new housing project.

In St. Croix, Mr. Paiewonsky arranged for the rehabilitation of fifty plantation cottages on Federally owned Estate Bethlehem, to provide homes for distressed families on that island.

In an effort to cut red tape, Mr. Paiewonsky also cleared the way to put into effect surplus food distribution to needy persons as authorized by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Paiewonsky is also taking action on the St. Thomas airport problem. The first study of the St. Thomas Airport, in 1956, was followed by four subsequent studies, with no results. Mr. Paiewonsky prefers to make the present Harry

Trans-Canada Air Lines Special Jamaica Holiday Tours Set The Pace For The Winter Vacationer

It's still bargain time in Jamaica! Canadians can flee the first onslaught of winter to this tropical paradise in the Caribbean to take advantage of off-season rates at Jamaican resorts until December 15.

Trans-Canada Air Lines is offering 17-day, year-round excursion fares to Jamaica, for both economy and first class travel, up to 35 per cent lower than regular fares, to bring Jamaica within Truman Field suitable for medium jets rather than to scrap it as was previously recommended and build a new one at the other end of the island.

The airstrip can be lengthened and hazardous Sara Hill removed by natural (and costless) means by using the rock-crushing plant already installed on the far side of the hill, says the New York Times. The islanders need crushed rock badly and in providing it the rock crusher can at the same time remove the hill.

Progress in other areas covers a survey of land utilization, including the orderly westward expansion of the town of Charlotte Amalie; the establishment of a new Department of Commerce, to include the functions of the existing Department of Tourism with expanded sections on trade, harbors and airports; paving and beautification of the Veterans Drive Highway, an invitation for bids on the improvement of St. Thomas's largest new residential development, Estate St. Thomas, and the reorganization of the Public Works Department.

reach of the pocketbook of every Canadian. These low fares are available only to residents of Canada or to Canadian nationals living abroad.

Jamaica is an island of contrasts. More than 4,000 square miles in area, it boasts mountains rising 7,000 feet above the waters of the Caribbean, tumbling rivers for exciting rafting trips, deep jungle valleys and miles of white sand beaches.

The 17th century pirates first recognized the rare beauty of Jamaica and during the halcyon days of the privateer and freebooter made Port Royal, now a sleepy little fishing village just 15 miles from the capital city of Kingston, the wealthiest and wickedest city in the Western Hemisphere.

An earthquake in 1692 put an end to the depredations of the pirates, which all the forces of the civilized world had been unable to do. A large portion of Port Royal slipped into the sea and today skin divers can prowl the coral-covered streets where the pirates and their women once lived in barbaric abandon.

After the quake, Port Royal became the bastion of British naval supremacy in the Caribbean where such British naval heroes as Nelson, Rodney and Bonbow left their marks. The ancient wealth and glory of Port Royal have departed, but the richness of its historic heritage remains. A tour of the ruins is a must for any visitor to Jamaica.

Kingston is a quaint, charming city whose shops contain a treasure-house of tropical goods at low prices. The Jamaican currency is the pound and the exchange rate on the Canadian dollar, coupled with low prices, puts a welcome premium on every dollar.

For the sportsman, Jamaica has just about everything, from magnificent golf courses and exciting polo matches to sailing, swimming, skin-diving and deep-sea fishing. Native delicacies and superb Continental cuisine make dining a culinary delight, while Calypso music and native dancing turn every night out into an adventure.

TCA tours to Jamaica cost as little as $46 per person for seven days and six nights, including three meals a day, with extra days at $6 each.

Good Packing, Light Luggage, Make Travel-Planning A Delight

Today's luggage has been designed for lightness and durability; as well as providing every assistance to the traveller: clothes don't crush when they are carefully packed in the newest luggage which is planned for every taste and style. A handy thing to remember is that name and address should be taped in each piece of luggage.

Every traveller should have passport number written down in each piece of luggage; an extra pair of glasses and sun glasses; extra flints and fluid for a cigarette lighter; spot remover; toilet soap; ball point pen and refills; cigarettes (can be bought on ship-board); band-aid, travel alarm clock; disposable tissue; wash cloths in plastic bags; sea-sick pills; extra passport pictures should the traveller need an extra visa at the last minute; and any good remedy against dysentery.

The best luggage is lightweight luggage where suits and trousers can be packed easily without crushing. A small folding extra bag is always handy to use for packing up gifts and purchases; and luggage should always be light enough for the traveller to carry it himself if he needs to. It makes it quicker in getting from place to place, and much simpler to get through customs easily.

Man-made fibres are a boon to the travelling man in a hurry. Nylon fabrics mean he is never caught with his shirts at the laundry and packing need take only minutes. He can travel for weeks with only the shirt on his back once he has mastered the drip-dry technique.

The lady traveller should have an adaptable wardrobe where the skirts and blouses can be mixed and matched. A good all-purpose suit, an all-important "little black dress"; a cocktail skirt and blouse; a folding or collapsible hat of jersey or non-crushable silk; nylon lingerie; a stole of wool which is light and packable; a glamorous sweater, and an all-purpose sweater will always come in handy; as well as a knitted jersey dress, almost indispensable because it does not crush; a light coat with a detachable lining; comfortable walking shoes and a pair of dress-up shoes. Make-up in plastic bags; a big, "easy-to-carry" purse, with lots of compartments; lightweight luggage, all make the trip easier and more pleasant. The least extra packages which can be carried make it much easier for the lady traveller since there are not always porters available and neither are there always men travellers who are able to carry her packages as well as theirs.

A small bag with what the lady traveller needs as basic requirements is a handy extra since often, if there is heavy luggage it may be shipped ahead, or it may not arrive at the same time as the traveller at the destination.

When packing a suitcase, don't overlook the space inside shoes, for belts, brushes, and other small items; and each pair should be in plastic bag.

New "package" tour plan gives you the money-saving advantage of a tour... with the freedom of independent travel.

Pick your own paradise or skip from island to island... you pace your trip to suit yourself.

New Season In Bermuda, Kinder To The Jews

BY KAROL BRAVERMAN, DIRECTOR OF THE NATIONAL DISCRIMINATIONS DEPARTMENT OF THE ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE OF BHAI BRITH

No matter when tourists visit Bermuda the twenty-one square miles of coral-covered, limestone hills rising out of the Atlantic 600 miles off Cape Hatteras, they find this British Crown Colony to be an island paradise, warmed by the Gulf Stream, endowed with luxuriant foliage and great expanses of pink sand beach.

In the past forty years — and particularly since World War II — Bermuda has gained a reputation of being one of the most splendid resort areas in the Western Hemisphere.

It has also gained another type of reputation: as a place where anti-Jewish discrimination was as rampant as the oleander covering the landscape.

To what extent was this reputation justified? How strong is anti-Jewish prejudice in Bermuda today? To find answers to these and related questions, I recently made a first-hand study of the attitudes and practices of the island's hotel and guest houses. I interviewed hotel executives and local officials, industrialists, bankers and scores of other Bermudians for a reflection of attitudes toward Jewish visitors.

As an Anti-Defamation League official concerned for many years with anti-Jewish discrimination, I had a good idea of the facts about Bermuda's practices in the past. The post-World War II period was marked by a spate of complaints charging discrimination by Bermuda's resorts, reports of crude denials of accommodations to Jewish guests. More often than not, ADL investigations revealed that the complaints were justified, the reputation deserved.

I find today that the picture has radically changed. Some vestiges of history remain but the happy fact in 1960 is that Bermuda and its principal industry — tourism — want no part of religious bigotry. Bermuda does want American tourists who will conform to local customs. But it understands that conformity — or lack of it — has no relationship to religious beliefs.

Many forces — including morality, business, and the law — combined to bring about this salutary change. Anti-Jewish bigotry in Bermuda is an unmentioned relic of an unlamented past. In fact, so sensitive are Bermuda resort officials to old charges of prejudice that they now express a new problem: what should they do when a resort guest, who happens to be Jewish, behaves badly? Will they be accused of anti-Semitism if they ask him to leave — even though their action has nothing at all to do with his religion?

A look at Bermuda's past helps explain the situation today. At first Bermuda — which is still completely subject to British law and the Crown — drew her visitors largely from England. Her relationship to the United States in the early 1900's was limited mainly to her role as a supplier of Easter lilies and Bermuda onions. (Bermuda onions are now usually grown in Texas.) Between the two world wars, the Furness Line began expanding resort hotels in Bermuda as an adjunct to its cruises out of New York. Tourism increased rapidly to the point where American tourist dollars became a mainstay of Bermuda's economy.

World War II — and the lack of available cruise ships — kept Bermuda's hotels empty. But the tourist industry was revitalized after the war. The cruises started again and, most important, Kindley Field — built and equipped by the U.S. Air Force for wartime use — was quickly converted into a modern, civilian airport to handle additional tourist trade. Bermuda's hotels began to multiply and flourish as profitable business institutions.

Then the complaints of anti-Jewish discrimination became most frequent. One major Bermuda hotel consistently wrote to prospective guests indicating that it catered only to Christians. Another repeatedly rejected Jews while simultaneously accepting Christians. A third had such a reputation for rigid anti-Semitism that protests were voiced in the British Parliament when it was chosen as the meeting site for the American, British, and French heads of state in 1953.

Many smaller inns and guest houses followed the lead of the pacemakers and shut their doors against guests who were (or appeared to be) Jewish. In one case, a man with a non-revealing surname arrived at night at a Bermuda hotel where he had made reservations. Before he could even register, he was accosted by a hotel official who asked whether he was Jewish. When the guest said yes, he was ordered to leave.

In short, during the 40's and 50's, there developed in the minds of many American Jews a picture of Bermuda as an off-limits resort hotel area. The image was re-enforced about five years ago when a magazine article stated that a "Bermuda Tourist Bureau" had developed a code for use by travel agents in identifying the race or religion of prospective guests. The code words were the names of Bermuda flowers: Oleander meant Gentile; Hibiscus, Jewish; Geranium, Negro; and Poinciana, Asiatic.

The article received wide currency in the American Jewish community and left readers with the impression that the "Bermuda Tourist Bureau" was an official government agency. (The impression was damaging and unfair; I learned in Bermuda that the "Bermuda Tourist Bureau" is a small private enterprise operated by a real estate and travel agent who has little connection with the Bermuda hotel industry and none with the Bermuda government.)

Despite the reports of anti-Semitism in Bermuda, many American Jews continued to travel there by ship and air. Most of them were booked by travel agents into one of two hotels which soon acquired reputations as being the only places where Jews could be comfortable.

At first, discrimination by Bermuda hotels seemed beyond the reach of an action program by ADL. The hotels of this Crown Colony were invulnerable to American legal action. Bermuda's distance from the United States made personal discussions with hotel operators impracticable. Two years ago, however, ADL sought and obtained the friendly intervention of a major airline which flies to Bermuda. We pointed out that Jewish customers who had tried to purchase a package vacation plan in Bermuda from the airline never seemed to be able to buy accommodations at one major hotel. The airline then made its own informal approaches to the hotel; Jews were soon accepted as guests there.

This small encouragement, however, was more than offset by a revelation made in January 1960. A U.S. hotel representative for a major Bermuda hotel was charged with engaging in a program to reduce the number of Jewish guests there and, conversely, to increase the number of Christian guests. The story was told in a front-page report in the National Jewish Post with accompanying documentation. Since then, the New York State Attorney General has been investigating to find out if the American hotel representative has violated the New York State law against discrimination by places of public accommodation. The publication of this story brought about a revival of interest in Bermuda and its practices concerning Jews.

ADL met with the New York staff of the Bermuda Trade Development Board, a Bermuda government agency, who said that the widespread rumors about anti-

Cunard Offers Sunshine Cruises To The Caribbean Ports; The Mediterranean Cruise Will Have Shore Excursions Arranged By American Express

Four gala Sunshine Cruises from New York to the West Indies and South America, from ten to fifteen days in length, have been scheduled for the winter season on the Cunard liner, Mauretania, starting on December 22, with a Christmas and New Year's cruise. Calls will be made at St. Thomas, Curacao, Port-au-Prince and Nassau.

After a thirty-eight-day cruise to the Mediterranean, sailing from New York on February 3, the Mauretania will resume the Sunshine series on March 17, with a nine-port voyage which includes calls at St. Thomas, Martinique, Barbados, Grenada, La Guaira, Curacao, Montego Bay, Kingston and Port-au-Prince.

The liner closes the winter cruise season with two twelve-day, six-port cruises sailing from New York April 3 and April 17. Listed as ports of call for the two cruises are Port-au-Prince, Curacao, Grenada, Martinique, St. Thomas and Bermuda. The Mauretania will be calling at Bermuda for the first time and her visit there marks the last port-of-call of the cruise.

The speed of the 35,655-ton Mauretania ensures voyageurs of more time in port, more time to enjoy the scenic beauty and rich cultural traditions of these world-famous vacation spots. And bargain-seekers will also appreciate the extra time for shopping in the fascinating market places of ports such as St. Thomas and Curacao for merchandise at special prices.

Aboard ship, a thoroughly-trained staff with thousands of miles of cruising experience will conduct an extensive program of activities which will include deck sports tournaments, first-run motion pictures, dancing under the stars, colorful costume balls, cocktail parties and variety shows.

The Mauretania's cruise through the sunny Mediterranean sea, leaving in February from New York, will follow the sun-filled southern route across the Atlantic to Las Palmas, quaint and colorful capital of the Canary Islands.

From there, the swift Cunarder will call at Madeira, Lisbon, Gibraltar, Tangier, Messina, Catania, Malta, Athens, Rhodes, Larnaca, Port Said, Haifa, Naples, Villefranche and Barcelona; and will return to New York March 13.

In port, cruise passengers will have their pick of exciting shore excursions arranged by the American Express Company.

Know Your Camera To Relive Holiday Experiences, Travel Highlights

Naturally, each tourist takes a camera, to relive each trip, with snapshots, color movies and slides. Some favorite pictures will be those taken during the ocean crossing: fellow passengers, fun and relaxation aboard; and interior and exterior shots of your liner. To this end the Cunard Line offers some suggestions to help capture memorable holiday scenes.

It's a good idea to take pictures in story sequence: start at home with packing, get a shot of the great liner at the dock before going aboard. A street level view from New York, taken head on, provides an especially dramatic picture.

Direct spray and misty air may fog the lens of the camera; keep it clean with lens tissue. A lens shade will permit many of the bright scenes so typical of ocean travel. Replace exposed film in the original carton. Don't seal the carton and don't rewrap the film in its silver foil. This may seal in moisture and spoil the film. Keep exposed film in a cool, dry place.

As there will be plenty of bright sunshine on the voyage don't over-expose under bright light. Expanses of water, deck, or the white superstructure of the ship reflect much light. For color film, it is desirable to use a light meter because of the small latitude in exposure.

When taking pictures of the shore from the ship, include a friend in the foreground looking at the scene, or a boat, life ring or other detail. Sunsets at sea produce beautiful color pictures. Try shots with the ship's wake as part of the composition.

Shipboard parties, dinners, game nights, dances — all are rich in photo material. Outdoor shots on the deck at night can also be taken with flash. A light-colored bulkhead close behind the subject will soften shadows by reflecting the flash.

Know the camera! For a new one, try a few rolls of film before leaving, to get the feel of the camera. A small waterproof bag will be good insurance against a wet camera, in a sudden shower. Take plenty of color film and fresh batteries to avoid possible local shortages. Present the camera to the Customs inspector on the pier before embarking; he will register the article and give a certificate to this effect.

A good set of photographs will double vacation pleasure over and over again.

Consult Your Travel Agent For Experienced, Impartial Advice

Impartial advice is the most valuable service you get from your travel agent. He is an independent business man. No one underwrites him. No one owns him. He recommends the transportation company, the hotel, the resort and the season which will give his client the best vacation he can afford; arranges for passport and visa.

Most of the travel agent's services cost the customer nothing, because he receives commissions from the hotels, resorts and transportation companies. But there are exceptions.

Foreign and domestic independent tours (known to the trade as FITs and DITs) are custom-made for a client and usually involve a vast amount of work in planning and checking connections and timing. The agent's price includes a charge for this outlay of time and labor. In escorted tours, there is the added cost of the guide.

One of the most popular vacations is the package tour which includes transportation, accommodations, sightseeing, meals and other features. Package tour operators are the wholesalers of the trade; the agents who book them are the retailers.

The tourist can go as an independent tourist or as a member of a group through travel agent planning very easily; or can arrange things himself. It is much easier to make all arrangements through the travel agent, since he has experience and know-how, and has much more available to him in contacts and information than the person making plans alone.

For the person who wants to go as an independent traveller, or in a tour, the travel agent can arrange every detail, transportation arrangements and hotel accommodations ahead of time with great ease. This is particularly important for the person staying close to the most popular tourist spots, since every good hotel in every main city is booked ahead in advance by groups, or by travel agents arranging and planning well in advance. The travel agent will take care of everything, once he knows how much the traveller wants to spend, how much time he has and when he wants to go.

As a member of an escorted tour the traveller has practically nothing ing to worry about. His tour leader takes care of everything except personal extras. Holland-America Winter Cruise Services Plan For Every Taste, and Every Holiday Time

A winter cruise schedule described as "the largest and most comprehensive of all cruise programs", is announced by Holland-America Line. Nineteen cruises, ranging in time from five to 80 days, will leave New York, conducting cruise members to Bermuda, the Caribbean-West Indies, the Mediterranean, and around-the-world in Holland-America's three largest ships, the 33,645-ton Rotterdam, the 36,867-ton Nieuw Amsterdam, and the 24,294-ton Statendam. All three vessels are completely air-conditioned and equipped with stabilizers for smooth sailing in all seas.

The Statendam will make nine Caribbean-West Indies cruises between December 1 and April 4; the Nieuw Amsterdam will make three, between January 30 and March 12; while the flagship, Rotterdam, will make three between December 8 and January 6, returning from the final Caribbean trip on January 21, just four days before starting out on her 80-day around-the-world cruise.

In addition to the Caribbean tours, the Nieuw Amsterdam and the Statendam will each make one cruise to Bermuda, the former ship leaving March 5 for five days; and the latter vessel sailing on April 15, for a 6½-day Easter cruise. The 1962 Mediterranean Cruise will be made by the Nieuw Amsterdam, sailing on March 26 for a forty-day tour of the "cradle of civilization."

Ports of call to be visited by the Caribbean-West Indies cruises include such renowned resorts as San Juan, Puerto Rico; Aruba and Curacao, Netherlands Antilles; Kingston and Montego Bay, Jamaica; Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Nassau, the Bahamas; St. Thomas, Virgin Islands; St. Lucia and Grenada, Windward Islands; and Port of Spain, Trinidad.

The Rotterdam's second cruise around the world does not leave New York until January 25, and has only limited accommodations remaining; and, reservations for the 1963 global voyage are now being accepted.

In planning the world cruises, the Line has been working with the foreign government tourist offices of all the countries on whose ports the Rotterdam will call, to develop a program to include a special "welcome" for the passengers at the ports; an introduction to the arts, music, foods, history and traditions of the "host" countries; and a service to assist passengers in making purchases of authentic products, at reasonable prices.

ORT Teams Are In Africa To Educate

The first teams of specialists assigned by the American ORT Federation, in New York, to make surveys of vocational education in Africa are there. The surveys have been organized under terms of a contract between ORT and the International Cooperation Administration in Washington, D.C. The project, a pioneering one, assigned to ORT the task of studying existing facilities in the field of vocational education in eight African countries, most of them newly independent, and to prepare recommendations for such educational development in the light of economic and manpower needs.

The team of specialists are composed of regular members of the staff of the ORT International system of vocational schools and of personnel from the New York City and Chicago schools. The first groups proceed to Mali, Guinea, and Nigeria. Other groups will go to Ethiopia, Ivory Coast, Sierra Leone, Togo, and Cameroun for studies in these countries. All these areas suffer from a severe inadequacy of skilled people. The survey is designed to lay down the principles for the establishment of national systems of vocational schools to provide instruction in much needed trades and industrial, agricultural, and construction techniques.

ORT, the Organization for Rehabilitation through Training, is a specialized agency in the field of vocational training which operates over 600 trade schools and related facilities in 19 countries and provides instruction in technical skills to 40,000 underprivileged Jews and others annually.

ORT has already had considerable experience in conducting such programs in economically underdeveloped countries as a result of its activities in North Africa, Iran, and other areas. ORT is at present engaged in a number of technical assistance projects involving African students, for the Swiss and Israeli Governments. American ORT Federation receives the major share of its funds from the Joint Distribution Committee, a member agency of the United Jewish Appeal, and from membership activities.

Semitism in Bermuda were completely false. It also promised every cooperation in arriving at the truth. ADL was urged to send a representative to meet directly with hotel people and government officials and to make its own free inquiries.

ADL's first step was to send a letter to each of the 63 hotels and guest houses in Bermuda asking, in substance, whether religious tests were used in selecting guests and whether Jews were welcome equally with Christians. With few (and unimportant) exceptions, all replied and indicated that religion was not a test of a guest's acceptability. Even those who talked vaguely about "social compatibility" said clearly that they were unconcerned with the religion of guests.

A most significant reply came from Arnold Feldman, the owner of Summerside Inn in Somerset, Bermuda. Mr. Feldman wrote glowingly of Bermuda and of the complete acceptance which he and his wife, both Jewish, had experienced since settling there two years ago. He echoed the suggestion of the Bermuda Trade Development Board that I, as an ADL representative, come to the islands to see for myself.

During my stay, I found that Mr. and Mrs. Feldman, a young and attractive couple from Wellesley, Massachusetts, are indeed regarded warmly by native Bermudians. In two years, they have earned a respected place in the community. The other half (literally) of the permanent Jewish population of Bermuda are Mr. and Mrs. Myer Malloy who, like the Feldmans, are citizens of the United States. Mr. Malloy has been in business in Bermuda for over 40 years, is a highly regarded real estate man. He says unequivocally that Bermuda, despite some sins of the past, is now relatively free of religious bias.

Other Bermudians — ranging from cab drivers and waitresses to industrial leaders — also convinced me that this is so. Indeed, it quickly became evident that Bermuda's intergroup problem is not religious but racial. Of Bermuda's population of 45,000, two thirds are Negroes. They constitute the labor force of Bermuda but are also represented in the professions and in the colonial legislature. As British citizens, they enjoy full equality under the law but they have not yet achieved equality in fact. Separate schools are maintained for whites and Negroes.

Bermuda's restaurants and bars (including those in hotels) started to accept Negro patronage only about a year ago. Negroes generally still cannot get rooms in Bermuda hotels — although there are rumors of unpublicized breakthroughs in this area too. Most people I spoke to acknowledged in one way or another, that Bermuda may become an arena in the conflict over racial integration and equality.

In this context, it is understandable that Bermuda wants to lay the ghost of anti-Semitism for good. Unanimously, the hotel people and officials told me that there ought not to be any religious tests for prospective guests and that, so far as they had control, there were none. Some hotel men pointed the finger at American hotel representatives as prime culprits in creating anti-Semitic policies. It was this group, I was told, that had deliberately fostered the "no Jews" motif in order to cater to snob appeal and exclusiveness.

The hotel men were not cast from a single mold. They ranged from the hearty extrovert who said that he "didn't give a damn about religion" and just wanted to keep his rooms filled to the serious, thoughtful sophisticate who talked at length about social discrimination and its implications. He believed that anti-Jewish barriers in private clubs — particularly in the northeastern United States — are the well-springs of all discriminations.

Almost universally, they asked me two questions:

"What to do about a Jewish guest who misbehaves?"

"Does the ADL immediately go to court when it gets a complaint of anti-Jewish discrimination?"

My answer to the first question was that it was meaninglessly narrow because of the word "Jewish"; a hotel has the unquestioned right to discipline any ill-mannered guest, so long as standards of behavior are applied without regard to religion. The second query reflected their fear that civil rights organizations would accept complaints without investigation and convict the accused without a fair hearing.

The question was put graphically by one hotel manager who said he recently had to ask a Jewish couple to leave because of their behaviour. (This particular hotel has entertained many Jewish guests.) He learned later that the couple had complained to their travel agent in New York City that the hotel was anti-Semitic and had said they were going to tell the Anti-Defamation League about the situation. The manager asked whether they had done so; I told him that they had not. He then asked what we would have done if the couple had come to us. Would the ADL have assumed that the complaint was valid and filed a complaint with a law enforcement authority?

I explained ADL procedures to this man and all the others who asked about them. (All complainants are interviewed by professional staff members of the ADL who evaluate truthfulness and who seek out witnesses. Sometimes, ADL itself dismisses complaints as being insubstantial or of a crackpot nature.)

If ADL, on investigation, believes that the complaint has substance, and if any hope exists for adjustment of the complaint by conference and negotiation, the next step is always a conference with the allegedly offending party, whether it is a hotel, an employer, or a school. This seemed to assure them that they would not be brought to task on a spurious charge of anti-Semitism, and that they are not taking more of a risk in accepting Jewish guests than they are in accepting Christian ones.

Certainly, the hard sociological and economic facts of life have contributed to the positive attitudes I met. Bermuda's economic and political leadership is concerned with growing pressures from the native Negro population. It is troubled by some decrease in Bermuda's hotel business this year. It is aware of the implications of ADL's educational activities as they affect the patronage of discriminatory hotels by convention groups.

It also recognizes that 80 per cent of Bermuda's hotel business comes from the northeastern United States where law enforcement authorities have, increasingly, been taking action against out-of-state discriminatory hotels that solicit business within their areas. These are practical persuasions to morality. Because of them, most of the practice of anti-Semitic discrimination in Bermuda is over. But the memory still remains; it may be a few more seasons in the sun before it is gone.

BOAC Flights To Bermuda And The Caribbean Are On Increased Winter Program

The biggest attraction of a holiday in Bermuda or the Caribbean is the leisurely and "foreign" atmosphere of the islands. It's hard to believe that only a few hours after leaving the chill of a Montreal winter, the traveller can be relaxing on a beach or a golf course!

British Overseas Airways Corporation flies direct from Montreal to Nassau, Montego Bay and Kingston. And starting December 16, this service will be increased to three flights a week, on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, with the Tuesday flight having Bermuda as its first stop.

Like most popular tourist resorts, Bermuda has its millionaire playgrounds, but it also caters to budget-minded holidayers. Not all the hotels are high-priced and there are also many small guest houses, most of which are run by friendly Bermudian matrons. Bermuda's prosperity comes mainly from the tourists and, with their natural friendliness and gaiety, Bermudians are well cast in the role of hosts. Here life moves at a holiday pace all the year round.

Bermuda's climate is semi-tropical; the sea is warm and exceptionally clear. There is good fishing for bonefish, snapper, wahoo, marlin, tuna, the acrobatic mako, and many others.

Golfers will find four 18-hole and two 9-hole courses on the island. The famous Mid-Ocean Golf Club is open to visiting players on Wednesdays and Fridays; other clubs have special terms for guests.

Nassau, capital of the Bahamas — which consist of some 700 islands most of which are uninhabited — is a wonderful spot to "get-away-from-it-all". It is hard to tire of Nassau's beach life; after a swim you can sip cocktails under the palms or under beach shelters with tops like grass skirts, or, if you prefer, you may simply like to cook your own meal on the beach.

But there are many other attractions such as strolling through the native markets, a visit to Blackbeard's Tower which was the stronghold of a notorious pirate, or a trip in a glass-bottomed boat to view the wonders of the underwater gardens. The Bahamas, like Bermuda, are semi-tropical, and during the winter season the average temperature is 73°F.

Jamaica, once the stronghold of pirates and buccaneers, has five distinct resort areas from which to choose holiday headquarters.

GERMANS WANT LODZ SURVIVORS TO TESTIFY

Two Nazi officials, alleged to have participated in the extermination of the 200,000 Jews of Lodz, have been arrested by the West German authorities, according to the World Jewish Congress in New York. Lodz had one of the largest Jewish communities in Europe prior to World War II. West German police have detained Otto Bradfisch, former commander of the German State Police in Lodz, and one of his aides, Guenter Fuchs. The two Nazis are charged with participating in the deportation of the 200,000 Jews from Lodz to the extermination camps at Auschwitz and Chelmno.

Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the World Jewish Congress' Institute of Jewish Affairs, has been asked by the German authorities to cooperate in tracing any Lodz survivors who can give testimony against Bradfisch and Fuchs. Witnesses should contact Dr. Robinson at 15, East 84th Street, New York 28, N.Y.

Kingston has the largest shopping center on the island and since it is a free port, there are wonderful bargains to be found, either in the exclusive boutiques or in the native crafts bazaar.

Best-known resort is Montego Bay with its lavish white sands. Port Antonio provides a different kind of entertainment: piloted banana-rafting down the Rio Grande. This is a great area for fishermen. Ocho Rios is a reef-sheltered bay, once again with beautiful sands, while Mandeville, known as the "English village" lies high in the heart of the island and is a cool mountain resort.

British Overseas Airways Corporation assures Canadian Jews that requests for Kosher meals will be scrupulously observed.

Jewish passengers usually mention at the time they are making their reservations that they will require these specially prepared meals. This information is then passed along to the airline's catering department, which makes all the arrangements. However, BOAC makes provision for last minute requests by maintaining supplies of Kosher food at airports along its routes wherever practicable.

N. Y. Chinatown, Not Lower East Side, Was Original Home Of Jews From Europe

Chinatown was the original home of Jews from Eastern Europe in New York City, and not, as commonly believed, the Lower East Side, according to Dr. Hyman B. Grinstein, noted American Jewish historian. Dr. Grinstein, who is professor of Jewish History at Yeshiva University, in New York, also contradicted the prevalent impression that the initial date of Eastern European Jewish migration to the U.S. was 1882, pre-dating this accepted year by more than four decades. Regarding the settlement in Chinatown, he explained that it was not until after 1870 that these Jews began "spilling over" into the Lower East Side from Chinatown, forced to do so by overcrowded living conditions.

As for the early arrival of Jews from Eastern Europe, Lithuania at first, and later Poland, Russia, Roumania, Hungary, and Galicia, Dr. Grinstein said, the first influx began during the 1840's, with a true mass migration not occurring until the 1870's and early 1880's. From 1840-1865, Eastern European Jews arrived in comparatively small numbers, although by 1880, there were more than 25,000 which was 10 per cent of the nation's Jewish population, Dr. Grinstein stated. Of these some 15,000 were living in New York.

Explaining the movement of these Jews from Chinatown to the Lower East Side, the historian said, "After the Civil War, the larger numbers of East European Jews coming to this country caused overcrowding along what we know as Mott, Baxter, Elizabeth, and Bayard Streets. This was met in two ways. First, the small buildings which then existed along those streets were torn down, and tall tenements, many of which still stand, were erected. Then, as even these became too congested, the Eastern Europeans spilled over the Bowery, the dividing line between Chinatown and the Lower East Side, into Forsyth, Eldridge, Orchard, Hester, and the other well-known East Side streets.

"In the 1880's, when the masses fleeing the pogroms and other Eastern European persecutions began to arrive in increasing numbers, the East Side, formerly the home primarily of Germans and Irish, was transformed. The new group moved throughout the area, almost to the banks of the East River. Again, due to overcrowding, the smaller buildings were raised, and tenements erected," he explained.

One of the factors identifying Chinatown with Jewish immigration is the predominance of Stars of David and other Biblical symbols in the tenements' once-ornate facades, according to Dr. Grinstein. "If you look closely at some of the buildings on Mott and other streets," he stated, "you can still see these ornamentations." Dr. Grinstein credits the Lithuanian Jews with being the first of the Eastern Europeans to arrive in New York. "This was a somewhat nomadic group," he noted, "constantly looking for localities in which they could improve their economic lot."

Dr. Grinstein made his remarks in an interview over Station WEVD. He also discussed the differences, in addition to geographic origin, which distinguished the Eastern Europeans from their predecessors who had arrived as early as 1654. "First of all," he noted, "the Eastern Europeans spoke Yiddish primarily, while the others usually had adopted the native language of their original homeland. Secondly, the synagogue customs of this group differed from those of Jews from other parts of Europe."

Dr. Grinstein described the original influx of Eastern Europeans as a "mere trickle", particularly when compared with the tens of thousands who began arriving in 1882. "But facts are there. The first of the Eastern Europeans arrived on these shores in 1840, more than 40 years before the date usually given for their initial immigration."

Dr. Grinstein, who is also director of the University's Teachers

Institute for Men, was born in Dallas, Texas, and educated in both Palestine and the United States. He received the Bachelor of Science, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees from Columbia University, in 1927, 1935, and 1944, respectively. After many years of service as headmaster of the religious school of Congregation Shaaray Tefillah, in Far Rockaway, N.Y., he joined the Yeshiva University staff in 1944.

Dr. Grinstein is the author of such noted works as "The Rise Of The Jewish Community Of New York." He holds membership in many scholarly organizations, including the American Jewish Historical Society, which he serves as corresponding secretary. In addition, he is a member of the American Association of University Professors and the New York Historical Society.

Yeshiva University, America's oldest and largest university under Jewish auspices, is celebrating its 75th anniversary throughout the 1961-62 academic year under the leadership of a national committee of prominent citizens, with President John F. Kennedy as Honorary Chairman; and Joseph M. Mazer, treasurer of the Hudson Pulp and Paper Corporation, in New York City, as general chairman.

On the occasion of its 75th anniversary, the University has undertaken a dynamic, ten-year, $30 million "Blueprint for the Sixties" physical development program. This includes three additions to its Main Center at Amsterdam Avenue and 186th Street, Manhattan: a $3 million, five-story, classroom-administration building, already under construction; a gymnasium-recreation center, and another dormitory; and a new Midtown Center on Manhattan's West Side. Yeshiva University comprises 17 schools and divisions located at six teaching centers in New York City. More than 5,000 young men and women are pursuing courses in Jewish studies and liberal arts and sciences, leading to undergraduate, graduate, and professional degrees and diplomas.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a long gown of white silk, embroidered with heavy Guipure lace. The boat-shaped neckline and lily-pointed sleeves were worked in a semi design of the lace with seed-pearl beads. A matching motif defined the waistline, and the bell-shaped skirt continued as a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was gathered to a double coronet of tiny seed-pearl beads; and she carried a bouquet of white stephanotis and orchids. Miss Sherry Kelner, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore a long, pale turquoise-blue, gown of peau de soie; cut with a boat-shaped neckline; and bouffant skirt. Mrs. Saul Kelner, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honour, in a long, pale turquoise blue, silk gown. Their headpieces were small coronets of that fabric, with turquoise-blue velvet bows; and they carried white, ivory fans, trimmed with silk, pink rosebuds, and turquoise-blue and white flowers. AN INVITATION TO JEWISH FAMILIES

The rapid growth of Belcourt's Westpark community is one of the outstanding achievements in building circles in recent years. We attribute this, first, to the extremely good values being offered in well-designed, well-built homes and, second, to the intrinsic merits and conveniences of this green-belt residential areas.

These advantages are, naturally, of interest to many Jewish prospective home-owners. In reply to a number of enquiries, we are happy to state that a Jewish community already exists in nucleus. Several families are now in residence, with more to follow in the near future. Suitable land is available for a synagogue, and full cooperation will be accorded the representatives of a new congregation. In other words, Westpark is past the "pioneer" stage.

We invite you to drive out to Belcourt's Westpark. Look around at the homes and the neighbourhood. If you like what you see, we can arrange for you to meet with other like-minded families. Please telephone Irving Zuenenshine or Ron Weiner at 733-1648 for further information.

The General Unconcern With The Moral Life

BY DR. LOUIS FINKELSTEIN, CHANCELLOR OF THE JEWISH THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY OF AMERICA, IN NEW YORK

We live today in an age when the ideas which for centuries have held people in restraint are being rejected in every country, and by members of virtually every religious group. All around us in America is abundant evidence of the general unconcern with the moral life, and testimony to the preoccupation with careerism and success which is endangering our future.

We Jews have the longest history of continued concern with ethics and moral education in the world. If ever there was a time when our studies, our discoveries, our understanding of moral problems could be of value to our society, time is now. My wish for the North American Jewish community this year is that each of us should in his own way devote himself to our tradition. Through such collective devotion, we may perhaps attain the wisdom and the greatness which could enable us to be truly a light unto the nations.

Avant le verdict

Le Cercle Juif de Langue Française, of the Canadian Jewish Congress, edited by Naim Kattan, says in an editorial:

Le procès Eichmann est terminé. Les juges israéliens feront connaître leur verdict dans quelques semaines. Leur sentence ne modifiera en rien le fond de cette tragédie. La condamnation d'un homme ne peut être que symbolique quand il s'agit du plus effroyable crime qu'ait connu l'humanité dans toute son histoire. Le sort d'Eichmann est dorénavant sans grande importance. Ce procès aura été cependant d'une profonde signification. Il a d'abord révélé au grand jour la profondeur de la décadence à laquelle l'humanité peut descendre. Ceux qui ignoraient les horreurs du régime nazi, ceux qui les ont oubliées, ont pu réaliser la menace encore présente de toute idéologie totalitaire. Le procès Eichmann a démontré la technique perfectionnée de la mort élaborée par une idéologie qui, au départ, n'est que l'homme. Ce serait, me semble-t-il, un peu trop facile d'attribuer la responsabilité des bandes hitlériennes en faisant porter la poids du crime à toute l'humanité. Si Eichmann est accepté comme un simple technicien d'une machine de mort on enlève toute responsabilité à l'homme. On le réduira ainsi à l'état d'un robot sans âme. Si l'homme n'avait plus à faire le choix entre la noirceur du gouffre et l'aspiration à la dignité, le courage, l'honneur, le simple fait d'être un homme n'aurait plus de sens. Au procès Eichmann, il y avait des juges qui demandaient des comptes à un criminel mais il y avait aussi des millions d'hommes de tous les pays et de toutes les professions religieuses et idéologiques qui portaient un jugement sur la plus grande aberration de notre époque. Là, l'humanité marquait le point de partage entre la négation de la vie et sa sauvegarde. Cet acte moral a pris des contours d'un débat juridique mais déjà la cause Eichmann est entendue. Il reste maintenant à l'homme, indépendamment du verdict, de défendre la sienne.

A VERDICT FOR THE TRIAL OF ADOLF EICHMANN

BY JESSE HILLY LEWIS, 5145 COTE ST. LUC, MONTREAL

Eichmann's life is forfeit to Israel, but no one shall take it. He shall remain in the custody of Israel for the rest of his life.

To implement the verdict:

I. He shall be removed to an undisclosed place and kept in solitary confinement, incommunicado.

II. He shall work without tools. He shall be taken from his cell every day to work in the soil, lifting out stones and piling them into a carrier-cart, at the end of the day piling the stones into a heap.

III. He shall be given wholesome food, but insufficient, so that he feels hungry constantly (like he assigned to his victims). When he is depleted to the condition of inability to work he shall be restored so that he can continue to work.

His cell shall have no artificial lighting. He shall have nothing to read and no writing materials. His mind will be thrown back on himself. No bulletins about him. His life shall be prolonged as far as possible, a living horror to himself and a witness to his regime.

The preamble: The trial did not set out to prove that Eichmann killed some one.

The trial was a research to disclose how six million Jews were done to death over a period of years; the manner and the means employed; how it was done; and the persons involved in it, more especially the part Eichmann played in it.

An important person in the legal profession announced, and it was publicized on the radio, that the trial of Eichmann did not prove that he murdered any one and therefore he should be set free. This is a gross misunderstanding of the trial and should be corrected immediately.

Jewry Loses Chairman Of Agudas Israel World Body

The sudden death of H. A. Goodman, chairman of the Agudas Israel World Body, at a London hospital, on Wednesday, October 11, at six o'clock, stirred the Jewish community there and abroad. He collapsed suddenly while at a Shiva-House in Golders Green, and was taken to hospital but never regained consciousness. The funeral took place from his home. He was taken to the Adath Yisroel Synagogue where a congregation of well over a thousand persons representing all shades and sections of the Anglo-Jewish community listened to eulogies by the Rabbonim, J. Dunner, Dr. S. Schonfeld, and M. Schwab. Among the congregants were the Chief Rabbi, the Haham, Rabbonim from London, Manchester, Gateshead, Sunderland, and other provincial towns, representatives of all Yeshivoth and communal bodies. Also present were leaders of Agudas Yisroel European Executive members from France, Holland, Belgium, and the British members.

Rabbi Y. M. Abramowitz, Deputy Mayor of Tel Aviv, flew there from France, where he was on a visit, to represent the Israeli Aguda. Hundreds of cars followed the hearse to the Enfield Cemetery where Rabbi A. Babad, chairman of the Central Council of the World Aguda, spoke of the untiring work of Mr. Goodman for Orthodox and Agudas Yisroel. He referred to him as a faithful servant, as the fearless and unflinching fighter for the rights of independent Orthodoxy. He was laid to rest next to his parents. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Miriam Goodman; three sons, a daughter, and a brother. At a meeting of the European Executive of the Agudas Israel World Organization tribute was paid to their late Chairman. The Rescue Committee was re-named the Harry Goodman Rescue Committee which will continue to care for refugees the world over. Rabbi A. Babad, chairman of the Central Committee, will supervise the affairs of the London Office, and M. R. Springer will be honorary secretary.

railroad siding to the extermination installations. Witnesses said women and children were usually gassed first. Men lived some two hours longer. While the gas chambers were being prepared for them, they were entertained by popular music played by a Jewish orchestra in an adjoining section.

A soft-spoken S.S. sergeant, called The Preacher by the slaves because he always gave instructions to the doomed, took pains to assure the Jews that all was well, witnesses said.

To prevent any display of emotion, the sergeant sometimes told the arriving Jews they were to be settled in the Ukraine, according to one witness. He then suggested that the Jews had little time and must hurry to the "showers," actually the gas chambers.

First their clothes and valuables were checked. Then the sergeant would lead them down a path between rows of barbed wire hidden with foliage, following arrows "to the showers." After the Jews had been gassed, the floor of the chambers opened and the bodies were dropped into trolleys for the run to the crematory pits.

The day of rebellion at Sobibor was October 14, 1943. A witness, Yacov Biskowitz, now a police constable at Tel Aviv, said the zero hour was just before the evening roll-call, says the New York Times, when girls working in the quarters of the camp guards stole grenades, a sub-machine gun, a rifle and some pistols. S.S. officers were lured into workshops and slain.

Mr. Biskowitz said he was to give the signal for eighteen mutineers to seize the armory. However, an officer unexpectedly turned up and commanded him and another prisoner named David to unload beverages at the guards' canteen.

Mr. Biskowitz said he carried a case inside and saw the "preacher" Sgt. Hermann Mikhael, counting money. Mr. Biskowitz testified that he stabbed the sergeant and slammed the door. From the street he heard the shout "Hurrah," signaling the start of the mutiny, and then some shooting.

He saw David running with an officer in pursuit. He made off in the other direction, wandered through forests for months and eventually rejoined the leader of the mutiny, Sasha Pierzinski, and a partisan group that blew up railway lines and demolished telephone communications.

Survivors from the other death camps, Majdanek and Chelmo, were also heard. A witness testified that the Majdanek camp orchestra played Strauss waltzes and contemporary hit tunes while Jews were being slaughtered.

The witness, Josef Resnik of Tel

Aviv, a Polish Jew who was captured as a prisoner of war when the Nazis invaded Poland, recalled how the band played while prisoners were being herded to a mass machine-gunning in November 1943.

The purpose of the music was to soothe the Jews who were strong and healthy and had been selected by the Nazis for forced labor, Mr. Resnik said.

Mr. Resnik was preserved for the business of exhuming bodies from mass graves, says the New York Times. There were about 10,000 bodies in one grave, Mr. Resnik testified. The Jewish prisoners dug them out, ground the bones to powder in machines and salvaged gold teeth and rings. Afterward, the graves were disinfected and grass was planted to conceal the evidence, he said. Mr. Resnik said he worked about three months opening eight of nine mass graves.

Mr. Resnik, a tall, lumbering man, said he helped to break the chains of fellow prisoners one night in February, 1944. He escaped with them through a secret tunnel they had spent two months digging. Sixty escaped, but only he and three others survived the war, he said.

Another witness said he saw Eichmann leading an inspection mission to the Majdanek death camp in 1942. He testified that Eichmann reviewed the ranks of Majdanek prisoners and growled the order, "Take the whole heap away." The prisoners had been kept standing all night waiting for Eichmann, said youthful-looking Yacov Friedman, a former Polish Jew.

Not many witnesses have placed Eichmann at a camp. Under cross-examination Mr. Friedman said he was sure it was Eichmann because "everyone knew he was coming — it was the talk of the camp."

Mr. Friedman asked if he recognized the prisoner in the glass cage, replied, "Well, he has changed, but his features have not altered." He said conditions at Majdanek were so ghastly that many Jews committed suicide by throwing themselves against the electrified fences. "The sentries tried to prevent this, not out of pity but because this meant work for them, switching off the current and removing the corpses," he said.

Prisoners were beaten or hanged almost daily, he testified. Men were executed simply because a sentry took a dislike to them, he said. They were made to undress, climb on a chair and be hanged in front of the entire camp, it was testified.

At Sobibor, it was said, at least 250,000 Jews were killed, says the New York Times. Dov Freiberg, slim and dark-haired was the first witness at Sobibor. He recalled a sign that read "resettlement camp" and the presence of vicious dogs, one "big as a calf." The dogs, he said, were let by the Nazis to bite Jews. One officer, the witness said, had a dog he called "man". He said the Nazi would order it: "Man, attack those dogs," pointing at the prisoners.

Jews bitten by the dogs were usually shot because the Nazis "did not like wounded workers," Mr. Freiberg said.

"We used to envy those who got killed or committed suicide," he asserted. Once when the gas apparatus at Sobibor broke down, the witness said, hundreds of "living skeletons" who had arrived on a death train had to wait overnight to be gassed. Many died while lying in the courtyard, it was said.

Assigned to remove the bodies and take them on trolleys destined for the crematories, Mr. Freiberg was asked by a "corpse" he was carrying, "Is it far?" Mr. Freiberg said he set the victim down and tried to help the person walk. He was immediately set upon by a Nazi guard with a whip, he said. "I dropped the body and dragged it to the wagons," he testified.

Prisoners, the witness said, were forced to sing anti-Semitic songs. Some were made to walk on all fours and bark. Mice were put into the trousers of prisoners ordered to stand at attention, reports the New York Times. Those who fidgeted were shot, Mr. Freiberg said.

The Bible is for You

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

It is the aim of Dr. Rosenberg, presently Rabbi of Beth Tzedec, Toronto's largest Synagogue, to show us how the Bible is more than literature, more than a record of law and culture of an ancient world. It is his aim to show how the Bible is, above all, a library of books devoted to and concerned with religious teaching, teaching that has relevance for us all when fully and personally understood. When we seek to experience the word of the Bible as participants in a moral and religious drama, and not merely as observers of an ancient record, Scripture comes alive in intensely meaningful ways. Through this fresh approach to the Bible, Dr. Rosenberg transforms Scripture into something altogether new. It is no longer the Bible. It is our Bible.

EICHMANN COURT HEARS OF DUTCH CHRISTIANS WHO RISKED THEIR LIVES TO SAVE JEWS FROM NAZIS

rated at the trial of Adolf Eichmann.

The slave laborers, kept alive by the Nazis to move bodies from gas chambers to crematories were incited to mutiny by a handful of White Russian Jewish prisoners of war.

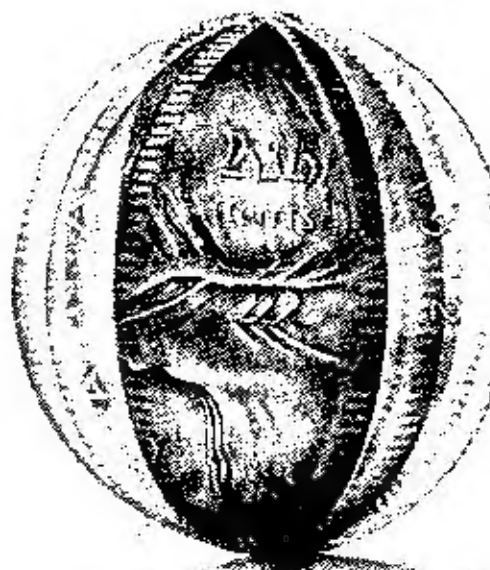

The coup was well planned. Survivors testified that between 600 and 700 prisoners participated, says Homer Bigart, in the New York Times. They said thirteen Germans and several Ukrainian militiamen were slain. About 150 Jews escaped but only thirty to forty survived the war.

Eichmann is accused of shipping millions of Jews to Sobibor and other death camps. For the story of the mutiny, despite knowledge that the evidence would be scarring, women by the score queued up at the entrance gate. They got their share of the grisly narrative, but none fainted.

Sobibor differed from the other camps in that it made no pretense of working for the German war effort. It was exclusively a death camp and Jews who were sent there by Eichmann's office had scant chance of avoiding immediate death. They were generally marched straight from a lonely
